Shah Najaf Mosque, Lucknow. Shah Najaf is the tomb of Ghazi-ud-din Haider Khan, surmounted by a dome and surrounded by walls of such immense thickness that the heavy guns of the Naval Brigade were unable to make any impression on them. This was a severe check to the British advance in November, 1857, until some soldiers of the 93rd managed to scramble over part of the broken wall at the back. Sergeant Paton received the Victoria Cross for the part he took in this escalade.

Dear A. I have promised to go out to bed on Thursday, so do as you like about coming, the others will be here also will whiff. Let me know what you decide. We shall be here on Sunday, if you prefer to postpone. Have had Corrie & Olive this week. Love from all.
